refuges in the National Wildlife Refuge System administered by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

This blue goose, designed by Ding Darling, has become a symbol of the Refuge System.

The refuge was established in 1937 and is the largest coastal marsh refuge on the Gulf. A primary management objective is to preserve a large area of coastal wetlands for wintering and migrating waterfowl from both the Mississippi and Central Flyways. It is also a major nursery area for many estuarine-dependent marine species as well as being the home for alligators and other reptiles, mammals, and numerous wading, water, and marsh birds.

The refuge contains 124,511 acres; its marshes range in salinities from fresh water to almost sea-strength.

Management Activities

The refuge habitat is for the use of all wildlife, with special emphasis on waterfowl. The management of this 124,511 acre refuge is not as intensive as that found on smaller refuges.

Techniques used at Sabine include burning, grazing, and water level and water quality manipulation. To facilitate water management activities the refuge has built ten major water control structures and over sixty-one miles of levees.

Because of many man-made and natural factors, habitat losses have occurred on an estimated 40,000 acres of the refuge. Major efforts are being taken to correct or prevent further loss.

A Vital Productive Area

Between the Gulf's beach cheniers (oak ridges) and the coastal prairie lies a basin of wetlands that is one of the most productive and fertile areas of North America.

This is where the rivers fresh water and the Gulf's saline waters mix; where the abundance of all wildlife is dependent on the proportion of vegetation to water, with the amount of vegetation being the important ingredient. This area could be called an estuary, a marsh, a wetland; its name is Sabine National Wildlife Refuge.

Here waterfowl, water and shore birds, furbearers, alligators, fresh and salt water fishes, and other marine species find a protective haven with abundant food and water. Some species are residents while others are seasonal visitors, but all need marshes for their existence.

Activities to Enjoy

Walk the Marsh Trail: Located four miles south of the refuge headquarters on the west side of Highway 27. This trail is 1.5 miles long and is designed for all visitor access. Insect repellent may be needed.

Interpretative panels and four marsh dioramas depict the various habitats found on the refuge and provide visitors with some insight into a coastal marsh environment.

Wildlife

Observation: During winter months geese may usually be seen between 6 am and 10 am on the grit site adjacent to Highway 27 and north of headquarters. Many types of wildlife may be seen year-round from Highway 27, but best viewing is from the marsh trail.

Boating: Over 150 miles of refuge canals, bayous, and waterways are open to boat travel for your investigation.

CAUTION: Open marsh may be entered only by paddling or push-poling. The operation of trolling motors is permitted. Visitor access by boat may be restricted during some seasons.

*Are you hooked on fishing?
Many types are possible on Sabine...*

Fishing: Recreational only—no commercial usage. See fishing leaflet for specific regulations on all water related activities. Canal usage by visitors may be restricted during some seasons.

Fresh water: Three impoundments totaling 33,000 acres are open to the public. Boat and motor are needed to fish these areas. Bass, crappie, catfish, and bream may be taken. Fishing license is required.

Salt water: Seasonally, flounder, redfish, croaker, and speckled trout (weakfish) may be caught in refuge canals adjacent to Highway 27. Fishing license required.

Crabbing: Blue crabs may be taken year-round, canal usage restricted during some seasons. Traps or pots are illegal. No license required for state residents.

Shrimping: Castnetting—Brown and white shrimp are seasonally available in refuge canals. Castnetting is an excellent recreational exercise and your catch is good for your health. Fishing license is required.

Waterfowl hunting: During the teal and regular duck seasons hunting is permitted on 24,000 acres. Consult hunt brochure for areas, times, and specific regulations.

Ask if it is permitted before doing any activity not listed above.

Camping

Restricted Activities

Camping is not allowed on the refuge because of the limited space available for public use.

Local camping areas: Sam Houston Jones State Park, north I-10, Westlake, Louisiana, Intracoastal Park-Highway 27, and Holly Beach.

Littering

Help keep these marshes beautiful by taking all your litter home. You are saving wildlife dollars.

Fires

A major danger to man and wildlife; please help preserve the refuge. Do not light fires.

Collecting

Do not gather or carry away plants, flowers, shells, etc., which make up the natural beauty of the marsh. Please leave them for others to enjoy. Permits are issued for special activities.

Firearms

Except for duck hunters during waterfowl season, no weapons are permitted on the refuge.

Harassing Wildlife

The refuge is home to all wildlife; please help us protect it by only looking. Do not feed the alligators.

Pets

If you do bring pets with you, only those on leashes are legal. Do not let pets run free.

Take pride in your refuge! Protect and enjoy its wildlife.
